Citations in the Text

Please use the Harvard System of Referencing. No citations in footnotes.
Authors' last names and publication dates are included in citations.	(Laclau 2002)
Page numbers are used if the reference is to a specific passage. Page numbers are separated by comma. Leave a space between the comma and the page number. Use f. or ff. for following page(s). Do not leave a space between the page number and f..	(Luhmann 2010, 61f.)
If the author's name is in the text, put only the date of publication (and page number) in parentheses.	...Luhmann (1997a, 46)
If the cited article has two authors, cite both authors, separated by a slash.	(Schneider/Kusche 2010)
If the cited article has more than two authors, use "et al."	(Mayntz et al. 1988)
A series of references should be put in chronological order and separated by semicolons.	(Luhmann 1995; Stäheli 1996; Nassehi 2004a; Schneider/Kusche 2010)
When you cite a finished sentence, please put the punctuation mark (fullstop, question mark etc.) before the quotation mark.	...“a specific economic enterprise, an industry that produces, promotes and sells private protection.” (Gambetta 1993, 1)
For subsequent citations of the same publication please only use page numbers.	...to try to get a jump on him” (Luhmann 1995, 116). When systems theoreticians transport this Hobbesian fear of war into the Systems Theory framework, it emerges as the ‘awareness of uncertainty’: i.e., the knowledge of the “improbability of social order” (117),...
For highlighting words or phrases please use single quotation marks.	‘Reality’, ‘truth’, ‘modern’, the ‘grace of God’...
